Herewith, an Englishman's account of life and death in the West..." Join John Dehner as J.B. Kendall, a British reporter for the London Times who writes and fights his way through the Wild West. Roaming the territories in search of colorful and unusual accounts, and his notoriously delayed paycheck, he has regular brushes with both the famous and the infamous. In exacting encounters and treacherously tight spots, Kendall can hold his own. While this Frontier Gentleman may be well spoken and meticulously mannered, that doesn't mean he can't handle himself with a gun. And, he's no slouch when it comes to cards either! This 8 hour collection features the first 16 episodes of this classic adult Western, all of which have been digitally restored and remastered. Plus, it includes the series audition recording as a bonus track! From AudioFile This program includes the first 16 episodes of this 1958 radio drama about a correspondent for the LONDON TIMES who files stories from the American West of the 1870s. John Dehner's strong voice conveys intelligence, authority, and sensitivity, though his accent is more clipped American than British. The supporting cast is able and experienced. Sound, sound effects, and musical original are good. Plots can become repetitive and the repertory cast's voices overly familiar, so it's best to space out the episodes. The stories are solid, often dealing with serious emotions and occasionally generating dramatic power. A sure pick for fans of old-time radio or Westerns. W.M. AudioFile 2008, Portland, Maine
