This is a book that transcends culture and geography. i gave my aunt in India a copy and she loved it.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. From Mort's Lips To God's EarsBy Meaghan RingwelskiI grew up watching Mort Crim on Detroit local news channel 4, and always admired him. To be honest, I had a small crush on him. How could I not, considering how charismatic, articulate and funny he is! Despite his retirement from broadcast news, Crim forged on with a radio show, then published a delightful column called "Second Thoughts" in the Detroit Free Press. This marvelous book is a compilation of the very best of those columns, and it's a must-have for anyone who prefers their wisdom folksy, straightforward - and heartfelt.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Mort Crim as a youthBy G. M. WesslingMort Crim was a preacher when he was very young and so has plenty of experience at seeing the right angles to give you great ideas. I remember that he came to our church around 1953 or 54 and we girls all fell in love with this 16 year old who could say more in 20 minutes than most preachers in an hour. He went far in life and left a lot of good info for everyone.

A collection of 100 essays reflecting celebrated broadcaster Mort Crim's conclusions about life after 35 years of covering world events. His daily radio series, from which this recording is taken, cuts through the gloomy clouds created by media fascination with the bad, the bizarre and the ugly. Its messages are crisp, cogent daily reminders that hope is not only reasonable, but the only rational basis upon which to build a life or society. You will find inspiration in this thought-provoking audiotape and realize that each of us makes a difference in the world.
