Forrester I find the piece pretty well written and much nicer sounding than the piece written for one piano. I play primo and the fingering needs to be well marked by myself in order to play legato on passages. Pedaling is important, too. Overall, I like it very much.

Duet for 2 pianos This arrangement has been made from a Soprano recitative and Aria from the Birthday Cantata by Bach. The piece has a fresh and pastoral character and the arrangement for two pianos stays true to Bach's balance between the beautiful melody and tone-painting in the harmonies.
