From Oxford University Press : Sonata for violin and piano before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Sonata for violin and piano:

The work is in three movements - the first is fast and aggressive and is based on a sequence that repeats throughout the rest of the piece. The second movement is, by contrast, slow and would seem to have been bruised by the first. The final movement renews the aggressive vehemence of the opening and grimly combines it with material from the slow movement. The work has, therefore, an A B A pattern.
